Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

2. Claims 1-3, 5, 6, 15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Maekawa et al (U.S. 6,865,047). Note figure 3 and flexible antenna 34 which extends along to walls of a cartridge such that signals may be received through two surfaces of the cartridge. The antenna is adaptable to interaction with a tape drive transmitting antenna or a hand held device transmitting antenna.

3. Claims 1-3, 5, 6, 8-13, 15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Stamm et al (U.S. 6,702,215). Note figures 12 and 13 and flexible antenna 1202 which extends along to walls of a cartridge such that signals may be received through two surfaces of the cartridge. The antenna is adaptable to interaction with a tape drive transmitting antenna or a hand held device transmitting antenna. Multiple antennas extending orthogonally to each other from a contactless memory device may be used (figure 21G)

Art Unit: 2627

4. Claims 1-3, 5-7, 15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Hino et al (U.S. 2001/0011012). Note figures 6 and 7 and helical flexible antenna 3 which extends from a contactless memory device along to walls of a cartridge such that signals may be received through two surfaces of the cartridge. The antenna is adaptable to interaction with a tape drive transmitting antenna or a hand held device transmitting antenna.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

5. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

6. Claims 4 and 11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Maekawa et al or Stamm et al or Hino et al. The references do not expressly disclose backscattering modulation for returning the signal from the flexible antenna to the transmitting antenna.

Official Notice is given that backscattering modulation was notoriously old and well known in the art for radio signal transmission between antennas.

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to utilize backscattering modulation for returning the signal from the flexible antenna to the transmitting antenna. The motivation would have been: such a method was recognized in the art as an effective approach for such an application.

Art Unit: 2627

Note that as to claim 11, only the Stamm reference applies.

7. Claim 14 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Stamm et al in view of Hino et al. Stamm does not expressly disclose his antenna as being helical.

Hino discloses that a non-contact IC module for a tape cartridge may utilize a helical antenna.

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have the antennas of Stamm be helical. The motivation would have been: a helical arrangement was recognized in the art as an effective option and Hino serves as evidence that a helical arrangement was specifically known to be applicable for an antenna used in conjunction with a non-contact IC module for a tape cartridge.
